

Preventing Violence Against Women

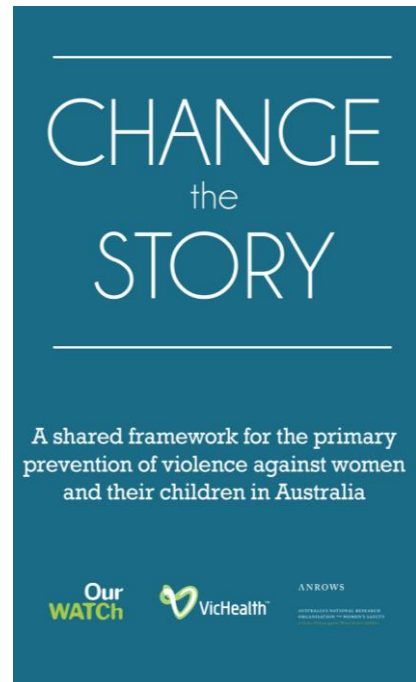

You Are Invited to learn more about the world first prevention framework, Change the Story.

Released late in 2015, this evidence-based framework provides us with the road-map to a nationally coordinated and shared approach to preventing violence against women and their children.

Ending violence against women and their children is a national priority. Work is already being undertaken across a range of sectors – by governments, non-government organisations, researchers and practitioners – to change the attitudes, behaviours and environments that perpetuate this violence. However this work cannot be undertaken in isolation. To end violence, we need to reach everyone, everywhere, and we need to go beyond individual behaviour change and drive broader, social transformation across our country.

Monday 6 June 2016, 9 – 11.30 am

Boulevard Room, Stamford Plaza, 150 North Terrace

Our Watch is delighted to advise that this free workshop will be opened by the Hon Zoe Bettison MP and Natasha Stott Despoja AM, Chair of Our Watch

This two hour workshop has been designed for anyone currently engaged, or considering being engaged, with preventing violence against women. It will provide an overview of Change the Story with a focus on the role of diverse stakeholders in building capacity for prevention practice and on the alignment with existing state and national plans.

- Where Change the Story fits in the National and State landscape
- The 6 elements of Change the Story
- Gendered drivers and essential actions to prevent violence against women
- Examples of prevention in practice
- Building capacity for prevention in Victoria

To reserve your place at this workshop please reply to RSVP@ourwatch.org.au.
